She received her education in a young ladles' seminary in New York City. During the last sea-son they attended Sunday school celebrations, picnics and church together. Their engagement was openly announced among their friends, and several weeks ago the marriage invitations were sent out. Their friends looked upon the wedding as a very good match. Yesterday afternoon was the time set for the wedding, at the real-dence of the bride's parents. Some fifty of their friends arrived by noon, and the Rev. Drexel was on hand to tie the knot. cured by DUFFY'S PURE MALT WHISKE The happy bridegroom circulated among his friends, smiling and receiving their congratulations, unconscious of the un-happy ending of his wedding day. Be-fore the time for the ceremony the girl's mother was handed a note from her daughter. It ran in this way:

DEAR PARENTS-Don't worry on my account. I am safe and in good hands.

I've changed my mind and concluded not

The guests quietly departed, and Miss Fuller's parents say they don't believe she has eloped, but is with one of her old schoolmates until the matter blows over. Linke says that she is unworthy of any man's love, and that he would not marry her. It is thought that at the last moment Miss Fuller objected to being a farmer's wife.

"O Lor' Bit 'Im Again!"

In the early days of Methodism in Scotland, a certain congregation, where there was but one rich man, desired to build a new chapel. A church meeting was held. The old rich Scotchman rose and said: "Brethren, we dinna need a new chapel; I'll give £5 for repairs."

Just then a bit of plastering falling from the celling hit him on the head.

Looking up and seeing how bad it was "Brethren, it's worse thon I thought; I'll made it 50 pun'."
"Oh, Lord," exclaimed a devoted brother on a back reat, "hit 'im again!"

There are many human tabernacles which are in sore need of radical building over, but we putter and fuss and re-pair in spots without satisfactory results. It is only when we are personally alarmed at the real danger that we act independently, and do the right thing. Then it is that we most keenly regret because we did not sooner use our judgnent, follow the advice born of the experlence and jump away from our perils.

Thousands of persons who will read this paragraph are in abject misery to-day, when they might be in a satisfactory condition. They are weak, lifeless, full of odd aches and pains, and every year they know they are getting worse, even though the best doctors are patching them

Raising Swede Turnips, It took me several years, writes F. D. Cartis in the Country Gentleman, to get the best of the turnip fly. For years they destroyed the Swedes, and at last I gave it up. Last year, by accident, I found that rank growing potato vines were distasted to the potato beetles, and that they did not disturb them. The discovery gave me a hint about the tur-nip fly, and, acting on it. a large patch of land from which the clover had been cut was plowed and covered with barnyard manure. The manure was so scattered that every inch of the ground was covered. Rows were then marked out with a corn marker, three feet apart, and the bottoms cleaned out with a garden rake, so that the seed drill could work on and in the fresh earth. The bottoms of these rows was the only place where the earth could be seen. Although the weather was very dry, the seed came up promptly, and such a growth I never saw before. Kither the files could not keep up with the turnips, or they did not like the odor or taste of the leaves, and they did not disturb them. In a couple of weeks the cultivator was run between the rows and the manure, and where it was covered and lodged on them brushed off. The cultivator did all of the work required, except the thinning out. The liberal coat of manura kept the ground moist and served as a mulch to keep weeds from growing. The yield was immense. I never raised a crop of roots with so literal coats of the property of the le labor, and there can be no doubt that, with such culture, a crop of swedes will always pay. When the rows were thinned the turnips taken out were spread between them, and served as additional mulch. This crop of swedes was not put in until the middle of July, and Appointed for the Wedding.
